

Medal Of Honor Winner Opposes War

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of two articles based on an interview with Lincolnite Bob Kerrey, a Vietnam war veteran and advocate of U.S. withdrawal.)

By DON WALTON Star Staff Writer

Like many young Americans, Bob Kerrey believes the U.S. should immediately withdraw from Vietnam, should end the military draft and provide its youth with alternative methods of service to their country.

But Bob Kerrey is unlike most young

He is one of a gallant few who hold the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Kerrey was presented the nation's highest military award by President Nixon at White House ceremonies a year ago last month. National Antiwar Drive

Now the young Lincolnite is on the verge of joining Allard Lowenstein's national antiwar drive to depose Nixon in 1972.

After a trip of two or three weeks to Peru to visit his younger brother Bill, a Peace Corps volunteer. Kerrey will meet with Lowenstein in New York to discuss the former congressman's invitation to join him in his national antiwar movement.

"President Nixon should not be re-clected," Kerrey declared.

That opinion is based on the President's Vietnam policies.

Lost Part Of Leg

A Navy officer in Vietnam, Kerrey suffered injuries which cost him part of a leg when an enemy grenade exploded at his feet while he was leading a raid on Viet Cong forces on an island in the Bay of Nha Trang in March 1969.

His bravery and "conspicuous gallantry. .above and beyond the call of duty" that day won him the Medal of Honor. It followed six previous decorations.

So he can speak from experience about Vietnam, about the military and about war. 'Collective Award'

Although he accepted the medal as an in-award to more than myself. Men died for

"But I don't like the idea of using an award to gloss over the real horror of war. I don't like the way we use military funerals.

"You cannot drape a flag around a mutilated body and say war is clean.

"It's as bad as you could think - and

So, Kerrey believes, you do not enter into it lightly or without sufficient cause. No 'Good Reason'

"I have yet to come up with a good reason to remain in Vietnam," he said.

The POW argument is "an upside-down idea," because prisoners are likely to be released only when the U.S. concludes its participation in the war, he noted.

"And the idea of an honorable peace is nearly impossible in light of what has happened there, after the way the war has been fought." Price Of War

Meanwhile, the war not only costs lives and limbs and resources. Kerrey said. It has driven thousands of young Americans into exile in Canada and haunted an estimated 10% to 15% of American servicemen in Vietnam into the dark corners of drug addiction. "When President Nixon and his supporters talk about an honorable peace, they talk about wanting to erase the things that have happen-

"It can't be done. We should withdraw as rapidly as possible.'

ed." Kerrey said.

The war, he believes, may have permanently damaged America.

'Monumental Task'

"There are going to be many lasting products of Vietnam. The drug addicts will present a monumental task of rehabilitation.

"And many GIs will come home embittered simply because they went and can't cope with Someone who kills may have that picture in his mind for life and he can't deal with The brutality of the war cannot be visualized by Americans who live in peace 7,000 miles away from it, Kerrey said. "I could not tell you what it's like to smell your own flesh burning or to feel down to the bottom of your leg and not feel anything. or to see your friends die.

'Cannot Communicate'

"You cannot communicate or transfer the feeling of pain, and this war has exacted physical, mental and emotional pain.

"It is distance that allows it to continue so long. Had it been in Missouri, it would have been ended long ago.'

So now Bob Kerrey, 27, a product of Lincoln Northeast High School, the University of Nebraska, the United States Navy and Vietnam, appears ready to step from the limited activities of Nebraskans for Peace to the national antiwar

But should he say yes to Allard Lowenstein, he noted, he will not be associating himself with the Americans for Democratic Action (of which Lowenstein is national chairman) or the Democratic Party or any particular presidential candidate who seeks to succeed Nixon.

"It will be to help end the war," he said. (Next: Obligations to Country.)

4 Persons Killed In Headon Crash

St. Paul (UPI) — Four persons were fatally injured and two others seriously burt early Sunday in the headon collision three miles west of here of a car and a pickup truck.

Authorities identified the dead as Dan Larkowski. 24, Cairo, Neb.; Mrs. Helen A. Reimers of Dannebrog, Neb.: Richard A. Zaruba, 27, Crook, Colo., and Mrs. Linda Zaruba, 22. Crook.

Hospitalized at Grand Island with serious injuries was Donald J. Reimers, 39, Dannebrog, and in "fair" condition at a St. Paul hospital was Loren E. Lewandowski, 17, Farwell, Neb.

The Howard County Sheriff's Office said Reimers and the four fatally injured persons all were passengers in an eastbound car which was in collision with the pickup driven by young Lewandowski.

The fatalities raise the 1971 Nebraska traffic toll to 144, as compared to 145 for this date in

IN PERSPECTIVE

By WILLIAM O. DOBLER

Show us a home with young children, said a recent "Today's Chuckle," and we'll show you a home where every pack of cards counts out somewhere between 37 and 51. That is just the beginning but it is a frustrating one.

Have you ever tried to make a complete deck out of maybe even three or lour matching decks of eards, with at least a couple cards missing from each deck? That can drive you mad The odds must be thousands to one against the same eards being missing from all of four decks but it can happen with ease.

But it also goes to show how we have boxed ourselves in with so many rules and regulations. Have you ever noticed that a deck of cards with several missing is no problem to the children? They can play hearts, rummy or just about anything they want with a deck of 47 cards and it makes no difference to them, at all.

They can mix up parts of three or four decks, not even matching decks, and end up with 90 to 100 cards and still play the games for which any of us would demand 52 cards of the same deck. Right off, you can see that this could create some problems. For instance the game is going along and the high card takes the trick. But suddenly, two players lay down an ace of spades. Adults could never solve such a problem and the least you would have is a misdeal, if not a broken friendship. The lady of the house might end up embarrassed and the gentlemen would be somewhat scornful.

But if you think that is a problem for the kids, you just have never observed them. How is it solved? One of the youngsters will reach for the trick, explaining that he played his acc of spades first.

That may solve the problem or it may not, depending upon the personality and imagination of the other players. If it makes sense to the others' concept of fair play, it is allowed. If the youngster who makes the move is older or the dominant one in the bunch, the play will also work.

Another solution might be found in the cards themselves. A player may note that his acc of spades is cleaner than the other ace of spades and he, therefore, is the winner of the trick. Well, that's a reason of some sort and it, again, may or may not stand up.

Another possible solution has in the size of the cards. It may be decided that the biggest card in size wins and with a multiplicity of decks, you would usually have different sized aces of spades. That is the argument that appeals the most to us but we must admit that there are countless others.

But the hand is not re-dealt, the cards are not thrown in, there are no penalties assessed and the game goes on its merry way. It is all as though such a development were a pertectly normal part of the game.

And have you ever heard of children complain of a missing card when playing with a short deck? The ten of hearts and three of clubs may be missing but it doesn't mean a thing to them. All that does is make the nine of hearts next in line below the jack and the two of clubs next lowest to

If you are playing hearts, you might think that two queens of spades would create a difficulty, but not with the children. It simply means that two players can get the black queen in every hand, making the game twice as exciting as otherwise.

There are even innovative and simple ways of dealing. You would think that the cards would all be shuffled and dealt, one at a time to each player until all cards had been But with a multiplicity of decks, one player can have the brown cards, one the blue cards and another the cards with peacocks on them. That way, the players assume an additional color identity and a little more spirit is injected

It just doesn't bother the young players what cards might be missing from their deck. It's not a bad lesson — that now and then we all need to do something just for the fun or enjoyment of it rather than demonstrating our skills or coming out a winner. So why not look at the bright side of things — that even a 47-card deck has something going

Uncle Sam, The Money Man

While we fail to buy all his arguments, we do subscribe to the conclusion of Sen. Wilbur D. Mills against the proposed federal sharing of revenues with the states. In our opinion, federal revenue-sharing would ultimately destroy a multitude of worthy programs and could lead to wholesale abuses.

DOME HERBLOCK

It is an impractical and inappropriate thing for government to go about giving out money with no accountability attached to it. Some states would properly use such money but others might well use it far more on the basis of political considerations than actual needs. Certainly, the taxpayers would have no control at all over how the funds were

Other states might simply use the money as a means of keeping their own tax levies down, not a bad thing per se but it fails to take into consideration the matter of public needs. Federal grants now are used as a stimulant to the states to undertake those programs that Congress has, in its considered judgment, determined to be of an essential quality but beyond the capacity of the states to finance themselves.

the taxpayer at least some protection against the abuse of public spending. When a government has no taxpayers to account to for its funds, that government has a strong temptation to play loose with the public till and that would be the case with federal revenue-sharing. We do not subscribe to Mills' argument that many states would get back less in shared revenue than the taxpayers of those states have contributed to federal coffers. Obviously, this is true but it is, also, logical and proper. Federal tax dollars go to support a multitude of strictly federal programs and activities. The idea of a federal income tax never was, never will be and never should be to assume the taxing authority and responsibility of states and local governments. Naturally, no state is going to get back from the federal government all its citizens pay in taxes. If it were otherwise, Uncle Sam would be nothing but a ridiculous and useless money man.

This is a sound approach which gives

Troop Cuts Unlikely

The announcement last week by the U.S. and its NATO allies that they are ready to open talks with the Soviet Union on mutual east-west troop cuts in Europe, hailed as a "demonstrative and positive step" by U.S. Sec. of State William Rogers, will be equally praised at the diplomatic level around the world. Many observers feel, however, that east-west talks on mutual troop reduction will be about as fruitful as the Paris peace talks.

As decided by NATO officials, the alliance is willing to agree on a date, place, organization and agenda for a conference with the communist bloc governments if the talks are based on conditions that mutual force cuts would be compatible with the vital security interests of the alliance, reductions should be on a basis of reciprocity, troop cuts should include both foreign and local forces in Europe and their weapon systems and there must be adequate verification and controls.

Reaching agreement with those conditions still intact would be difficult enough, but doubly so when the underlying reason for major Soviet troop presence in eastern Europe is laid bare, in the opinion of some observers, including columnist Joseph Kraft. This well-accepted belief entails the Soviet justification of troop presence in eastern Europe to offset the corresponding presence of western allied forces, while in fact the Soviet Union requires the presence of manpower in the area for internal police purposes to keep the Warsaw Pact states safely beneath its wing.

"It is a safe bet that the mutual troop withdrawals between the Big Two will be one of the marathon talks of all history," Kraft writes. "The prospect is for a pullout that takes place only in the never-never time, say around February 30th of some year."

So the recent bilateral pronouncements about troop reduction talks might be regarded as only propaganda initiatives, with the full realization on both sides that it will never By DON WALTON

Nebraska came out of the 1971 session running in place.

It could be the pause that refreshes, but it also might be an excuse to sleep. That will be determined later. Having held general state tax rates essentially at 1970 levels. senators will face increased tax-spending pressure in an election year. The most conspicuous ex-

Senators will be in session when the mid-March filing deadline for candidates comes. Thus, during the final climactic days of the session, when the conclusive decisions on budget and spending are being made, about half of the members of the Legislature will not only be nearing a primary test, but they will know just how tough their opponents may be.

They just might vote accordingly.

Senators will be conducting the beginning stages of their primary election campaigns from their seats in the Legislature. That's never hanpened before.

It could be that senators will wish next year that they had spread out the spending decisions over a two-year period, beginning now, rather than allowing them to pile up in Or, they may decide to beck

This year, that committee had its way on spending. Next year it will probably produce a recommended budget not long before the 60-day deadline and the pressure will be heavy to send it through unaltered. That means any senator who wants to spend more money for any specific program or project had better get an appropriations bill of his own in the hopper and on its way long before the operational budget bill

The same may be said for capital construction, particularly if a majority of the A p propriations Committee. facing political pressure at home and from other members of the Legislature, yields to the temptation to forego or postpone their implied commitment to provide construction funding for newly authorized projects.

TOM WICKER Revenue-Sharing Receives Thorough Discussion; Sensible Reform May Prove To Be Good Politics

Washington Secretary of the Treasury

Murray L. Weidenbaum, a principal architect of President Nixon's revenue-sharing plan, says the administration now is 'open-minded'' about the details of the program. This bid for a compromise was echoed by other Republican spokesnien, but it is not vet clear how far they will be will-

It may have to be pretty far. That was shown plainly by the adverse reaction to John Connally's opening testimony before the Ways and Means Committee; and some think the combined opposition of Chairman Wilbur Mills and the ranking Republican, John Byrnes, is enough to kill the proposal.

On the other hand, Mills may be more vulnerable than he looks. Having given the impression that he was going to produce a mountain of welfare reform, including a federal "takeover" of state and local welfare costs to serve as a Democratic alternative to the designed to reinvigorate state Nixon revenue-sharing pro- and local government and thus not, in fact, take over the major welfare cost of family assistance; and it has become clear in any case that federal assumption of welfare costs benefits a few large cities and states without doing enough for the best.

Over in the Senate, however, Edmund S. Muskie of Maine appears to have produced something much more nearly to be described as a "Democratic alternative" the Nixon plan. Mills is likely to find himself under pressures from his own party colleagues to move toward the Muskie approach, as it becomes clear to them that only Nixon can profit from the refusal of a Democratic Congress to deal with the President's major legislative proposals.

The President, after all, has

While this rhetoric may be inflated, there is little doubt that revenue-sharing would constitute a serious and farreaching reform in American find something better or more promising: it is quite another to frustrate Nixon's "revolution" and stand pat on outmoded New Deal doctrines. Aside from the politics of the thing, compromise in this case bination of categorical grant centives to persuade the states general economic growth.

Leon Panetta, the former director of the Office of Civil Rights in the Nixon administration, has pointed to another reason for "an apcentrate solely on revenuesharing." In a recent speech, enforce non-discrimination in relatively limited categorical grant programs. Despite numerous instances of discriminatory use of federal funds by states and localities, government. And it is one thing and the lack of federal staff for the Democrats to attempt to and guidelines for enforcement, OFF THE RECORD Panetta asked, "are we really prepared to add $5 to $10 billion to a pot of money that is already being poorly handled?" He called instead for a com-

"This approach," he said, "would permit civil rights enforcement to continue to improve on categorical aid, have federal civil rights officials, through revenue-sharing and rather than state or local, welfare and health, and provide a more limited revenue-sharing program that would be more easily monitored for pliance with the law."

Developing such an approach - or any other useful comon whether the principals are worrying more about politics he argued persuasively that it or reform. The tiny rundown house hidden behind the overgrowth at gone too. The courts declared him incompetent -- he was 77 years old - and his appointed guardian had him placed in Westview, a county home for the Phil fought it all the way but in the end he lost.

City officials considered his house, which was stacked to the ceiling with papers, magazines and other leftovers of the 20 or 30 years Phil had lived there, a dangerous fire hazard

The two-room house lacked working indoor plumbing (Phil collected rainwater for drinking, bathing and flushing the toilet) and was heated by several old wood-burning stoves.

Phil's story is a classic example of the difficulty public agencies have in coping with the problems of the elderly who do not want help

'No one is equipped to handle the situation effectively ' con tends Cily Housing Auministrator Carl Kopines

The reason, Kopines feels, is that there has been "little public concern "from the residents of Lincoln that "Phil's problems are their problems and need

'Do we or do we not have a responsibility for Phil - to help him even though he does not want to be helped?" Kopines questions.

Responsibilities Unmet

Those with authority to act on the federal, state and local levels, he said, have also "not fully met their responsibilities to solve the total problems relating to the independent-minded

'Something needs to be done to effectively deal with the person who has reached the point where he cannot take care of himself before a Hector buins

"Let's not lose another life because of conditions under which they live or the method used to effect relocation to safe, sanitary and decent housing,' Kopines said

The problem of how best to handle the situation delicately provides a dilemma to those attempting to do something about elderly persons living under unsate conditions or unable to take care of themselves.

There apparently is a lack of clearcut policy on what to do with elderly persons who refuse to leave their premises.

It a person is declared to be incompetent, as in the case of Phil, a guardian can be appointed who would have the responsibility to get him relocated.

Guardianship Route

City Atty Dick Wood said after consulting with legal counsel for Phil, he decided to go the guardianship route rather than prosecute Phil for keeping his yard in a cluttered condition or obtain an injunction to prevent him from living there

"We felt this to be the most humane way," said Wood, who felt that the other procedures would do more harm than good ior Phil."

Trabert said there is a "tendency for some elderly" who are forcibly removed to soon die "because of not being able to adjust to the new surroundings

Emotional Shock

Kopines said he also feels that the emotional shock to such a person can at times be more than a person that age can withstand.

In some cases, Kopines said, "It's like plucking a flower from the ground — in a short matter of time the flower wilts and dies '

The housing administrator said that in those housing code violation cases coming across his desk in the past, he has first checked to see whether there is a relative that could take care of the person.

Lacking such a relative, the person if he is still mentally and physically capable of taking care of himself - and the housing conditions are not as bad as Phil's - is allowed to remain providing a public health nuise can check on the person periodically and a neighbor can look in daily.

Windgusher May Try Ak Again

Omaha - W. C. Norvell of Houston, Tex., and his trainer, Laurence Robideaux, Jr., have a big decision to make - whether their 3-year-old star Windgusher, should try to negotiate a rout of ground or keep running sprint distances.

Under the reinsmanship of Jimmy Nichols, Windgusher surprised the local three-year-old favorites by winning Saturday's $20,000-added His Majesty's Council Handicap. He covered the 6 furlongs in 1:12 1-5 over a track rated "good."

Next up for the 3-year-olds at Ak-Sar-Ben is Saturday's runming of the $20,000-added 4-I! Handicap at one mile and 70 yards. It is the next step toward the $40,000-added Omaha Gold Cup Stakes on June 26 which will decide the 3-year-old back to Chicago," Robideaux said. "He (Windgusher) has never gone a route and we don't know for sure whether he is ready yet.''

Switching to a longer distance may be a blessing to the local 3year-olds. Cornish Sister, owned by Hoss Inman and Bud Ogden of Lamar, Colo., battled Windgusher on even terms before losing by 112 lengths Saturday. And Sea Phantom, owned by singer Ray Price of Dallas, Tex., was third.

Omaha — Nebraska Racing 'Hall of Fame honors will be bestowed on three natives of Nebraska and one of the state's finest homebred horses

The 1971 honorees are former jockey Steve Brooks, the late Ralph Boomer, Harry Farnham and the pride of the M. H. Van Berg Stable, Rose's Gem. The Hall of Fame dinner will attract outstanding personalities of the racing world along with friends and relatives of the recipients.

Mr. Boomer served as secretary of the Nebraska State Racing Commission from 1942 until the time of his death on Jan. 15, 1970. His b ehind-the-scenes contributions were many, including the constant updating and periodic publication of the Nebraska Rules of Racing. He also served as State Steward from 1946 through 1967.

On the national level he served as an officer and director of the Society of North American Racing Officials. He also served in many important capacities as a member of the National Association of State Racing Commissioners. He served as a steward in New Mexico and Arizona.

In 1969, he was presented the Nebraska Thoroughbred Breeders' Service Award.

Mr. Boomer's wife, Melba. will accept the plaque for her late husband.

Brooks's 32-year record as a jockey makes him one of America's premier reinsmen. Upon his retirement, Brooks ranked No. 4 in the all-time jockey standings in races won. His 4,447 winners ranks him behind only the incomparable Bill Shoemaker, John Longdon and Eddie Arcaro. Purse money during his career came to $18,214,947. During the height of his brilliant career, he was the rider for Calumet Farms. Among the most famous horses he rode were Citation, Coaltown and Ponder.

Q. How will the war end?

Arnett Covered War For 8 Years

EDITOR'S NOTE—Since his reassignment to the United States after eight years of covering the Vietnam war, Associated Press correspondent Peter Arnett has spoken on the subject to many American audiences. Invariably, he was asked many questions on these occasions. In this article, he deals with the questions most frequently asked. The answers give his view on a conflict he started reporting long before it gained a central place in American affairs.

Here is a practical little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is six or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add three. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures gives you.
